

Abstract

The disclosed is a protection film to be formed on a thin film device formed on a substrate, which is characterized by having a hydrogen content of not less than 30 at%. It is possible to provide a protection film of high reliability and with a thick film thickness as the protection film for the devices such as the organic EL device.